

Germany's highest administrative court will rule on the meaning of legal tender

The Bundesverwaltungsgericht in Leipzig, Germany's highest administrative court, has set the date for hearing my complaint against the refusal of the German public broadcasters to accept the payment in cash of the "Rundfunkbeitrag". That is the fee that all Germans have to pay by law to finance public broadcasting. At stake is the meaning of legal tender. Can public institutions refuse to accept the settlement of a money debt by means of the legal tender? Aktenzeichen: BVerwG 6 C 6.18
